

Environmental performance indicators While GWP measures the contributions of products or processes to climate change by measuring the greenhouse gases used, other important environmental impacts can be neglected if only GWP is taken into account. A product with a low GWP can still cause major damage to global biological well-being, such as water consumption and soil acidification.