

GWP

While GWP measures the contribution of products or processes to climate change by measuring the greenhouse gases used, other important environmental impacts can be neglected if only GWP is taken into account.

A product with a low GWP can still cause great damage to global biological well-being, such as water consumption and soil acidification.

AAC powder